

STUDENTS

Student Annuals

Annuals are sold to students each year; therefore, they become the personal property of the student. The Privacy Act and district policy No. 3231 protect a student's personal property from being searched, unless there is reasonable cause to believe the student is in immediate danger.

Therefore, a staff member may not discipline a student for language contained in a student's Annual if permission was granted to write in the Annual. The exception would be if a student were to deface another student's Annual without permission being granted to write in it. A student who defaces another student's Annual will be responsible to pay full replacement cost and, per district policy No. 3240, face possible corrective measures such as suspension or expulsion.
