Interested in being a part of the district’s Human Rights and Equity Team?
On October 24, 2018 the Snohomish School Board approved the charge - “The Snohomish School District will identify and convene a group of representative community members whose purpose is to learn about the dimensions of equity and discrimination in schools as hubs and microcosms of our community; to assess needs concerning equity and discrimination across the District; and to propose shared commitments, structures and action steps designed to address identified needs. Such commitments, structures and action steps should be undertaken in a manner that is consistent with the value that we place as a community on inquiry, collaboration and purposeful action.”
To fulfill this charge, the school district is reconstituting the Human Rights and Equity Team. The focus of the group will be on racial and cultural equity and will include community members, staff and parents who are willing and interested in pursuing this important work. Those interested can learn more and apply by clicking here or visiting www.sno.wednet.edu/humanrightsequityteam.

Snohomish Health District to present “How to Have the Talk About Opioids”

The Snohomish Health District and Snohomish School District are partnering together to bring you an event focused on opioids in the home. Join us Tuesday, January 15 from 6-8 p.m. at Glacier Peak High School (7401 144th Place SE in Snohomish) in the school’s Performing Arts Center as the Snohomish Health District presents “How to Have the Talk About Opioids.

In addition to a panel discussion and community resource tables, there will be a mock bedroom set up for attendees to walk around and investigate. Find out what products are available on the internet that people purchase to hide drugs and paraphernalia. Learn what to look for and then what to do if you suspect substance use. Attendees will also get tips on how to prevent access in your home, and how to talk to youth about opioids.
